starvation after cattery closes due to adverse weather Three puppies died and 12 others have to be nursed back to health at a rescue centre in Exeter in the UK. Breeders of the Pom Pom Pitbulls breeding programme claimed the "unseasonal" weather was the cause of their closure - but at least one of the owners of the cattery, West Wales Dogs, has denied this. The crisis happened after the cattery was forced to call its last remaining dogs because of heavy rain and snow. A spokesperson said: "Our first priority was to protect the healthy dogs and act quickly to provide extra space and food for the more vulnerable". A rescue and rehoming scheme run by West Wales Dogs rescued and rehomed more than 1,000 dogs in Wales and southern England over the past four years. Breeders of the Pom Pom Pitbulls breeding programme claimed the "unseasonal" weather was the cause of their closure - but at least one of the owners of the cattery, West Wales Dogs, has denied this. The cattery, in Wool, was forced to shut its doors after heavy rain and snow. The rescue and rehoming scheme run

UTF8 STRING:CD75A8FD-76D5-43F2-AFFD-3AB8B879A17A

Is it possible to solve it? A: This is because the token contains data that makes use of variable length encoding. These are known as character sets because they encode ASCII characters as a 1-byte escape code and this 1-byte value is used as a surrogate pair. If you have a look at the token from the tool, you'll notice that it is a valid XML document (and not something compressed) and that there is an attribute with this name which is simply a list of characters including their Unicode codepoint (UCS-2) and their UTF-16 encoding value. Using the information that can be found here: It's possible to decode the UTF-16 value (Hex) into the Unicode codepoint. This is what MDATIO does in the XML file, except that the encoding is turned into a sequence of bytes and not a sequence of characters. For what it's worth, this is what the Excel file also does for the string value. The Unicode codepoint 5F5F5F5F maps to the UTF-16 value 0xBCD2D2D2D2D (253) and by combining it with the first byte 0x5F, one can figure out the encoding of the string: 0x5F 0xBC 0xD2 0xD2 0xD2 0x5F = 0xBC 0xD2 0xD2 0xD2 0x5F It should be noted, that since this is a UTF-16 string, the character value is actually $253 * 2 = 512$ (hex) bytes. If you compute how many characters this string has (263), you'll find that it maps to a single byte in UTF-8. In order to make use of this information, it is necessary to first turn the UTF-16 string into a sequence of bytes. This is easy when parsing a file as XML and using the original strings, however, when you're using strings as a result of some other action, you're going to need to use a different approach. The old solution was to use `sprintf` and then use a call to `sprintf` and a `0cc13bf012`

With regard to sports, for example, when noting that USA Gymnastics was worried about the potential negative implications of the potential for increased risks of sexual abuse in the wake of the Larry Nassar scandal, and that USA Gymnastics "does not shy away from that possibility." In response to that, however, USA Gymnastics did also note that, in their words, "the conduct and risks involved in the sports of gymnastics or any other specific sport are much more varied and complex than that with which we are all familiar. That means that, in this particular instance, rather than just being worried about risk of sexual abuse, USA Gymnastics was also concerned about the potential for "any number of other 'high risk behaviors'" that could have included "mental health problems or addictive behavior." I haven't heard the full story yet, so I don't know what the full implications might have been, but I'm sure that the spreadsheet is going to be voluminous and detailed. Okay, don't ask me why that's a secret, but that's the way it's always been: USA Gymnastics has been heavily involved with everything sports related, and they were in a position to have advanced knowledge of all sorts of things going on in the world of sports, but for some reason, they've kept all of this secret as one of their closed books, and there have been many on-going questions about why this is the case. (My first thought, naturally, is that it's all part of a larger financial conspiracy to support the artsy-fartsy lifestyle of people like Kerry Huffman, who really don't care about sports, and really don't want to talk about anything that might be shown to have anything to do with sports.) Posted for the record.
