Srs HD Audio Lab 1.1.25 crack direct .by Lisa Marie Pupala In the aftermath of the gruesome mass shooting in Las Vegas on Sunday that left 58 dead and hundreds more injured, Republican presidential nominee Donald Trump reiterated his call for his opponent, presumptive Democratic nominee Hillary Clinton, to be locked up and on trial. The mass shooting occurred at a country music festival on the Las Vegas Strip and was eventually ascribed to a lone gunman, although police have not yet confirmed the shooter’s name or motives. On Monday, Donald Trump tweeted that he agrees with former President Ronald Reagan that it’s “time to stop thinking about politics and start thinking about terrorism,” according to The Washington Post. “We can’t talk about gun laws in the wake of a mass shooting. We can’t talk about voting rights right now. Why? Because this is about terrorism,” Trump told reporter Al Drago of Fox News. “If Hillary Clinton’s really that smart, she should probably apologize to our country.” Clinton, speaking at a press conference in New York on Monday, asked for a moment of silence for all those who died and who were injured in the attack. Her remarks were interrupted by a cry of “shoot,” but she said that was “a phrase people use that I’ve heard before.” She continued, “This is not normal. This is not politics as usual.” Asked about Trump’s calls for her to be jailed and for Clinton to be tried, Clinton said, “I am so saddened by this violent behavior.” She emphasized that she’s the only candidate in the race who’s been “tested” by the military and intelligence services. She added that “the vast majority of the people here love this country, respect our values, stand up for freedom, and know that you can be at home in the United States of America and know that you can worship freely and that you can practice whatever religion you choose.” Clinton has faced consistent opposition from the right over her handling of emails sent on a private server during her time as Secretary of State under former President Barack Obama. The former candidate was also targeted for prosecution for allegedly mishandling classified information.1.
