I encountered this in the following sentence and I am very confused. The nature of the 4 Hz, 2 Hz, and 8 Hz peaks, their strength and centrality are not correlated. Does it mean, the 4 Hz peak is the most central one and the 8 Hz peak is the least central one? A: From the Cambridge Dictionary: Centre (adj): The part of something that is central to its organization, or the place where the chief activity takes place So you could say it means the 4Hz peak is the most central part of the spectrogram, and the 8Hz peak is the least central. Q: How to use a black and white stripe (or reversed) as a background of a cell I'm getting familiar with the LayoutEngine that Cell understands. I'm wondering if it's possible to paint a cell in the background to a BW/Black and white striped pattern. As an example, the drawing is for simplicity a pattern of a solid 1 but there are actually several of these triangles that I don't want to draw with the Pen tool. A: You can do this by inserting a stroked rectangle and then turning off the Fill, or creating a stroked line and applying a Fill. A: I don't believe you can do this with a stroke. The ShapeTools.CreateRectangle and ShapeTools.CreateLine give you the
