this doubleheader at Commonwealth Bank Stadium well and truly gone, Newcastle Knights players, staff and supporters were on the lookout for their new team's first win. The last big win for the Knights was in round 1 of the 2012 season against the Parramatta Eels. A month later in Round 12 the now defunct Gold Coast Titans came to town and did a number on the Knights 30-10. So this year the Knights have a new look, a new owner, new head coach and a new look for the home game against the Wests Tigers. I'll admit that for a long time, before I started covering the footy I never gave the Knights a thought. I had no idea of the history of the club, much less the minor league football history. I had no idea of the Knights being a foundation club that put together a first grade team from the very first grade competition. I had no idea of the Bevan French era, or the legacy he had to leave the club.
Heck, I was even unaware of the Rugby League Heritage sequence until I saw a recent interview with Craig Bellamy talking about his initiation into the game. The only thing I knew of the Knights was what I read in the newspapers. As a regular fixture in the Sunday papers, I would devour the Newcastle Herald and the AIMSM as a kid, trying to find out more about the team I was so fascinated by. And by the time I had finished reading each Sunday paper, I couldn't wait for Monday to come so that I could get to work. When I started doing a radio show on the Newcastle Football Club, I'd
