Suppose you have an array of ints and you want to calculate the average of the integer values in that array. Can someone provide an efficient way to do it? This seems like a simple problem but I am not finding a way to do it. I was thinking of creating a 2D array with n x n size and summing the elements of the inner array in each column, and then using that array to calculate the average. But I am not sure whether there is a simpler way. A: Use `std::accumulate(std::begin(arr), std::end(arr), 0) / std::size(arr)` which will return the average, and `std::begin(arr) + (std::size(arr) / 2) * std::size(arr)` which will return the
