A panel of nuclear industry experts identified risk as the key issue in the organization's work force. Data on the risk knowledge, perception, and attitude of the workforce were compared with the risk knowledge, perception, and attitude of the population as a whole. The panel's findings indicated that the nuclear workforce was more knowledgeable about risk than the public. The panel believed that better understanding of risk management and active management of the risks in the workplace were feasible, and it made recommendations for such efforts.
